Welcome!

Thanks for participating in this international and interdisciplinary workshop, dedicated to Responsible Research and Innovation (RRI). The purpose of this workshop is to bring together scholars working on RRI from all kinds of backgrounds and disciplines, with the aim of investigating in which ways the current RRI discourse ought to be extended as well as how to bridge the gap between RRI theory and such theory being usefully applied in industry. For two days, these topics will be approached from different perspectives. This workshop has been made possible by a Global Alliance Scheme grant from Charles Sturt University, awarded to the Australian Centre For Applied Philosophy and Public Ethics (CAPPE), whom organized a precursor to this workshop in Canberra earlier this year. The workshop is also funded through a grant from 3TU. Ethics.

All of the participants are invited, and each of them will approach the topic from different backgrounds – some having worked in the area for several years and others being new to the field. Some talks will be exploratory and presented for the purpose of constructive feedback, some will be the result of years of experience with the purpose of making us better informed about what is really needed, and some will be reflective with the purpose of learning from experiences gathered in the many research projects around Europe. There are several EU FP7 and other large research projects represented, and another aim of this workshop will be to forge existing networks as well as initiate new ones –with an eye towards future collaboration opportunities and consortia. For all of this to work, we hope that you will contribute actively to the discussions, both in the workshop room and outside, and to help make this a workshop that we all benefit from – whether in regard to our current or future research.

Kind regards,
Johnny Søraker
